Dr. Varney Lectured on Habits

This morning at 10:30 o'clock Dr. Chas. E. Varney gave a splendid lecture on habits at the Temple before a large audience, which included the entire high school and faculty and the eighth grade students. Habit is nature's time saving gift, the speaker said, and he began his definite and practical subject discussing the habit of walking, showing why and how persons from infancy do it. Breathing and assimilation are the only two habits that are not learned. To demonstrate his lecture Dr. Varney used a blackboard, thereby making his points clearer and more forceful. Nature is no respecter of carrying habits, bad and good ones travel over the same path.

Dr. Varney gave and illustrated four laws on how to overcome bad habits and form new ones. They are: First, break off bad habits by getting new ones; second, launch them with the right emotional interest; third, erect a sentinel in paths of nervous discharge, and, fourth, never refer to old habits.

At the afternoon session Cap's orchestra gave another of its delightful entertainments, followed by Prof. Jansen, who spoke on exercises in the home and at school. He gave blackboard illustrations of stigmatism and curvature of the spine, interspersing his lecture with poems. Prof. Jansen has a magnificent physique, is the son of a minister and 38 years of age. Today he visited the public schools.
